WAR IS FOR EVERYONE

The first reports from the Pacific, and those that have followed, go beyond the worst nightmares of many in the extent of damage to life and strength that has occurred. Vincent Sheean, just arrived Monday night from the Far East, reported that American naval losses in the first thirty-six hours of action are greater than those suffered by the British since the war began.

No reports have been officially confirmed stating the full extent of American losses. It can only be assumed that there has come what many have said America has needed—an equivalent of Dunkirk—to learn what this war must mean.

The uncertainty and agony of learning what the first strokes of the Axis against the United States have counted in blood is fast working on the American people, bringing the realization that blood and steel must be spent and that nothing is secure but the acceptance of total war and the courage to fight in the face of great losses.

And on Dartmouth College the American Dunkirk in the Pacific has brought stark silence and twistings inside individuals, the agony of knowing that the fight must be made, and soon, by all of us. Laughter and humor, lies low and falls flat when it tries to rise.

In the silence of their own thinking many are now waiting, in agony, for the decision to come. Many make the deadline Christmas vacation: "I'll enlist then, if I can; if I can't I'll come back, maybe." The decisions of the individuals are what will determine the action; there is no way, for the decision to be made for the whole College. War is for the single individual; the men of Dartmouth College must make their own decisions.

For those who have decided to enlist, for those who will not return after the holidays—and they are perhaps more than we think—there is nothing to be said. The decision belongs to every one of us, individually; when it has been made it belongs to the maker. It can only be hoped that it has not been forced, that it has been made with sure and intelligent conviction.

For those who feel the value of a degree or at least a definite marking point for a degree to be of greater importance than their enrollment in the armed forces, their decision too is their own and its fulfillment as grave a responsibility to the strength of the nation as being a part of the army, navy or marines.

And for those undecided: there has been no definite demand for men. The facilities of enrolling and putting into training new recruits may, in the face of the rush of volunteers, be jammed. Entrance into training may be delayed so that the present semester can be completed, perhaps the year. Under such circumstances it would be unwise not to complete as much of the year's work as possible.

And to the whole College: This is a war for all of us. The College can not keep us out of it even if it would desire to. The decision to fight must be faced by all of us. There is no deferment. If each man makes his own decision, ascertaining for himself what individual course of action will be most useful to the nation in this war, there is no more to be said. But for those

Chess Club Will Gather Tonight in McGill Union

The McGill Chess Club will meet this evening at 8.00 p.m. in the Reading Room of the McGill Union. This meeting is the fifth in the club's program for this year, and the main feature, apart from the regular novelty tournaments and exhibition games, will be a discussion on the knock-out tournament, and how it can be expedited.

The Club is also planning some social activities, to be run in co-operation with the other campus societies. In this connection the executive are considering extending an invitation to the Mandolin Club to play at one of their meetings.

Brown Will Be Honoured

U. of T. Confers Degree On McGill Dean

Dean Ernest Brown, head of the faculty of Engineering, will be honoured tonight with a degree being conferred upon him by the University of Toronto.

Designer of Canada's first concrete ship introduced during the first World War as a steel-saving measure, Dean Brown has been at McGill since 1903. He became dean in 1931 following the death of H. M. Mackay.

During recent years he has been engaged in the testing of models of water turbines in order to increase the efficiency of Canada's power installation.

Dean Brown was born in Lancashire, England, and received his engineering training at University College, Liverpool, and in London, England. He came to McGill as assistant professor in the department of Civil Engineering and Applied Mechanics. He was later made associate and then full professor of Applied Mathematics and Hydraulics.

Among other activities in public welfare, Dean Brown has studied the properties of ice in connection with the St. Lawrence Waterway. During recent years Dean Brown

S.C.M. Will Hold Xmas Open House Thursday

The S.C.M. is holding a special Christmas Open House at eight o'clock on the evening of Thursday, December 18th, in Strathcona Hall. The program will include several Yuletide games, as well as social and folk dancing. Refreshments of a seasonal nature will be served, and a member of the Open House Committee stated that the drinks were being brewed or distilled by engineers.

All those who attend the gathering are requested to bring a pencil with them, and also a small gift suitable for children. A member of the S.C.M. emphasized that the cost of these should not exceed 25 cents, and that secondhand gifts would be acceptable. These will all be sent to a home for needy children.

Medical Aid Committee Will Hold Rally at Forum

Ex-Ambassador to Russia Is Scheduled to Speak

The Committee for Russian Medical Aid, which was organized in Montreal in October and which is now affiliated with the Canadian Red Cross in a $500,000 drive for medical assistance for the Soviet, will hold its first big rally in the Forum on Thursday night at 8.30 p.m.

The speaker for the evening is Joseph E. Davis, Director of American War Relief, and a former American Ambassador to Russia. Other outstanding persons on the program are Louise Rainer, who will recite, and Thomas L. Thomas, who is scheduled to sing.

This Committee which is largely composed of members of the Faculty at McGill, invited Dr. H. E. Sigerist, Professor of the History of Medicine at Johns Hopkins to speak at their organization dinner last fall, and during his stay in Montreal he lectured at McGill on "The Social History of Medicine." Immediately following his address, many men prominent at McGill joined the committee.

The Advisory Board comprises the following: Dr. B. P. Babkin, Sir Edward Beatty, Dr. J. F. Browne, Dr. Grant Fleming, Dr. F. Cyril James, Dr. Wilde Penfield, Dean Meakins, Dr. Pensted, Dr. D. L. Thomson—and from University of Montreal, Dean Lesage, Prof. Laugier and Monsignor Chartier.

In addition the Executive Committee has three prominent McGill men on it, namely: Dr. Francis McNaughton, Dr. Paul G. Wilde, and Dr. John Kershmen.

Scarlet Key Has Elections

Colonel Forbes, Others Speak At Banquet

At the annual banquet of the Scarlet Key held in the Union Grillroom last Thursday the new executive for the coming year was elected. Those chosen were: President, Ralph Edmondson; Vice-President, John McMartin; Secretary, Thomas Davies; Treasurer, Alan Thompson.

At the banquet, which commenced at 6 o'clock, the Key had as guests Colonel Forbes, former Athletic Director at McGill, Dr. Lamb, Director of the department of Physical Education, Hay Findlay, and Glen Cowen, President of the Students' Council.

The elections were held immediately after the meal. Following this, James Graham, last year's President, gave a short talk on the history of the Scarlet Key telling how the idea for the organization was taken from a similar group of this kind at Dartmouth called the Green Key. He then mentioned the various duties of the members. The secretary gave a short outline of the club's activities during the past year.

Short talks were then delivered by Colonel Forbes, Mr. Findlay and Dr. Lamb. After their talks the floor was thrown open for general discussion during which several aspects of the functioning of the club were considered.

Chapel Service Suggests Xmas

Mood Maintained With Quiet Carols And Soft Lights

In the quiet light of the Divinity Hall Chapel, decorated with the traditional Christmas candles and filled to overflowing with a capacity crowd of students and friends, the McGill Choral Society presented a program of Christmas Carols and Hymns.

The service was under the auspices of the McGill Choral Society, the Student Christian Movement, and the McGill Christian Fellowship. The organist was Mr. J. Robb, Mus. Bac, L.R.S.M. (Eng.), and the Choral Society was under the direction of Mr. A. D. Chapman, permanent conductor of the group.

The congregation took part in the singing of the well known Christmas hymns, "Adeste Fideles," "Hark the Herald Angels Sing" and others. The Carols, "I Saw Three Ships" and "The Coventry Carol," bespoke the joyous aspect of the season, and such works as "Three Chorales from the Christmas Cantata" by Bach; "Holy Night" by Gruber, and "Quem Pastores Laudavere," added a more sombre note to the musical atmosphere.

The balance of the service consisted of appropriate reading and Christmas prayers. At the close of the service the organist played the "Prelude and Fugue in D Minor" by Bach as the Postlude.

Annual Mock Parliament Will Be Held Thursday

A Mock Parliament Sponsored by the Debating Union Society will take place on Thursday at 8 p.m. at the Union Ballroom. The Government Party will support the Prime Minister in a Motion asking Parliament to approve the formation now of a National Commission for the planning and, at the conclusion of the war, for the execution of social and economic reconstruction.

Malcolm McAfee, a first year student and the winner of the Bovey Shield contest, will be the Prime Minister; Winston Mahabir the runner-up in this contest will be the leader of the opposition. Each of the two will have their staff of supporters; some of the ministers will be Independents. The speaker of the house will be Mr. P. Vineberg from the Department of Economics.

Engineers to Debate at R.V.C.

Plumbers Show Reluctance in Taking Part

The R.V.C. Debating Society is attempting to complete arrangements for their debate with the Engineers, who have displayed some reluctance to continue this competition, which has become a yearly custom.

The Debating Society has selected as the topic of the discussion "Resolved that Co-education should be abandoned for the intellectual benefit of the students." They chose this subject because the debaters themselves and the student body as a whole have shown themselves interested in it. The debate will be open for all McGill students who wish to attend.

Last year the Plumbers triumphed over the co-eds, who paid for their defeat by buying dinner for the victors. This year the prize will be the same.

The Debating Society has expressed the hope that the Engineers will forget their objections to holding the debate and consent to take part in it, since in past years it has always been a success.

Scrooge, in 19th Century Garb, Brings Yule Air to Moyse Hall

By R. P.

The Christmas season is one of honest sentiment and the spirit of true brotherhood among men. This season has animated many of our noblest traditions; Santa Claus and the giving of gifts are instances.

Charles Dickens has admirably captured the spirit of the Christmas season in "A Christmas Carol" and this fact, along with its superb dramatic and historical possibilities makes it an excellent presentation for the Yuletide.

Ebenezer Scrooge—a supreme paradigm of the inevitable meanness and miserliness in mankind walked the stage—of Moyse Hall. Moyse Hall, where uninterested and bizarre freshmen heard and hear English 2; where Professor Odolozik

First Photograph Contest For Annual Ends Today

The first contest for entries in the "Campus Life" section of the McGill Annual will close today. To be eligible for this contest all photographs must be handed in either to Fred Paine the Photography Editor, or at the Tuck Shop.

There will be three more contests after this one, and all entries received in this first contest, except the winning photograph, will be automatically entered in the succeeding contests. The prize for each winner will be a free copy of the Annual.

All campus subjects are eligible, and Intercompany indoor sports and women's war work have been particularly suggested as appropriate for entry.

Publication Appears Soon

Forge To Go on Sale Wednesday

McGill's literary magazine will go on sale Wednesday of this week. The cost will be as usual 25c per copy, and will be sold at Bill Gentlemen's office, in the Arts Building lobby and in the Union Tuckshop.

The managing board has described this year's effort as "different," emphasizing the streamlined character of the magazine. The cover will be of modernistic type, yet of collegiate design for it will consist of red characters on a white background. There is an increase in the number of pages over last year from 36 to 48 pages, though the managing board wished it understood that the increase in quantity of material printed was not an indication of the lack of quality.

"We have attempted this year," stated one of the editors, "to achieve a balance between conventional and unconventional literary matter, keeping in mind however that the magazine is for the consumption of university students, and consequently that it should contain articles of interest both to mathematicians as well as to philologists."

A feature of this year's "Forge" will be the lack of illustrations, "whiteness" being the predominant theme, which it is believed will

Conservatorium Club Will Hold Christmas Party

The Conservatorium Club of McGill will hold its Annual Christmas Party at the Conservatorium on Wednesday, December 17, at 8.30 p.m. This is the first meeting which the club has held this season.

A program has been planned in advance and this will include entertainment by the club members. A farce, which is based upon a Greek tragedy, will be presented, and everyone present will be able to participate in the carol singing. Dancing will conclude the program and refreshments are being served.

Not only music students and their friends will be welcomed, but anyone attending the University is free to attend.

There, Ebenezer Scrooge robbed it of its modern veneer; there, too, he conjured up visions of the England of the last century while Tiny Tim walking with her crutch—for the role was portrayed by a girl—suffused the atmosphere with the electric of the Christmas season.

Directories Give Vignette Of McGill Cosmopolitanism

The Ubiquitous Smiths Are Most Abundant as Usual

By G. R.

The new McGill University Directory of Students appeared on Thursday morning as scheduled. It occupies only one page more than last year's, although the page numbers are exactly similar to those of the preceding one: from page 1102 to page 1178, for the new one, and from 1102 to 1177 for the old.

In format and size there have been no new developments. Curiously enough, there are exactly 24 Smiths in each of the two successive copies. They seem to lead the field, there being only 9 Ross' and 8 Jones'. Even the Browns run second to the Smiths, with a mere 15 representatives in the field.

Of course McGill has once again this year attracted a cosmopolitan student body to its campus. From such comparatively distant spots as Bogota, Colombia; Sierra Leone, British-West Africa; Shanghai,

China; and California, students have come, from a variety of causes: McGill's medical reputation, the high rate of foreign exchange, or the impossibility of going to such British Universities as Oxford and Cambridge.

The latter was the prime reason for the relatively large influx of Trinidadians. The Americans seem mostly to be in the medical faculty; they come from California, Dakota, New York, Florida, and all points in between.

The last student listed in the directory is David N. Zweig, B.A. 4, who was also tail-end in last year's issue. A girl leads the list: Marjorie M. G. Abbey, B.A. 1.

The directory is put out by the Registrar's Office for the Students' Society, to which go the proceeds. The book is on sale at the Union, Bill Gentlemen's Office, and the Registrar's Office.

Dean Rejects Bonus Scheme

Neville Calls Credits Idea "Sympathy Racket"

Dr. N. J. Cody, President of the University of Toronto announced last week that a bonus on examination marks may be granted to those men in the Canadian Officers' Training Corps. Dr. Cody said that each faculty had drawn up its own regulations in respect to the granting of credits for military training, according to conditions obtained within the faculty work. Any bonus allowed is granted in accordance with the recommendation of the C.O.T.C. or training center battalion.

In most cases provisions have been made for the granting of bonuses for military training for students who are on the border line or slightly below the required standing. A bonus also may be granted where it would bring a student from second class into first class honors.

Dean K. P. R. Neville of the University of Western Ontario was very firm in his denunciation of this scheme referring to it as a "sympathy racket." He said that the proposal was contrary to an agreement reached at a conference of Canadian Universities held two years ago. "These lads have a chance of getting commissions out of their training," he said, "that's recompense enough."

Cosmos Feature Yuletide Party

Celebrations to Open With Xmas Turkey Dinner

As a prelude to the Cosmopolitan Club Christmas party, which is to be held in Strathcona Hall at 8.15 p.m. on Tuesday, a Christmas dinner, complete with turkey and all the trimmings and rounded off with mince pie and coffee, will be held in the Pit at 6.45 p.m. A special corner of the Pit, fully decorated for the occasion, will be blocked off for the special use of the Club.

At the dinner, the entertainment committee has promised there will also be some form of entertainment, the exact nature of which is to be kept a secret until the time of the party. After the dinner, the members will retire upstairs to the Common-room, where they will be greeted by Santa Claus keeping guard over the Christmas tree.

The program will open up with a short singsong, and a few games, after which more secret activities will occur. Finally dancing will begin which, with the exception of a break for a candlelight parade 'neath the Mistletoe, will last for the remainder of the evening.

At R.V.C.

R.V.C. is having a Christmas Party for the Radio Technicians at McGill on Wednesday, December 17th, at 8.30 p.m., on the same style as the one which was previously held.

Women Will Give Party

Technicians Are Guests of RVC On This Occasion

McGill women are again hostesses to one branch of His Majesty's services this week when they hold a Christmas Party for the Radio Technicians at McGill. This party will take place on Wednesday at 8 p.m. in R.V.C.

About one hundred girls are required to assist on this occasion. Members of the committee in charge will be in the Women's Common Room of the Arts Building this morning after 10.30 a.m. and registration may be made here. It has been decided that the required admission for the girls is a box lunch plus ten cents. Boxes for the purpose of packing these lunches will be available at the Porter's Office in R.V.C. on Tuesday. The girls attending this function are requested to be present in R.V.C. by 8.15 p.m.

The party will be conducted along the same lines as previous entertainments held there for the R.C. A.F. Dancing will provide the main diversion of the evening. The party is scheduled to last till 11.45.

According to a report from R.V.C. the girls enjoyed so thoroughly the previous dances that they decided to give more, similar entertainments, of which this is the first.

Philosophers to Discuss Present-Day Poetry

The Philosophical Society will hold its last meeting before the holidays on Wednesday evening in Strathcona Hall. The speaker will be Irvine Layton, graduate student. Subject of the discussion is "Metaphysical Implications of Modern Poetry."

"The subject to be discussed at this week's meeting," the executive said, "is obviously calculated to be of interest to literature students as well as to philosophy students."

Everyone wishing to attend will be welcome, in accordance with the policy of the Philosophical Society.

First Smoker To Be Held in Gym Tonight

Companies A And C Will Hear Band

Companies "A" and "C" will get together tonight at 8.00 o'clock for the first of three M.R.T.B. smokers to be held at the Sir Arthur Currie Memorial Gymnasium, in conjunction with the Assault-at-arms. The men are to come dressed in uniform, but they may bring along male friends or relatives. Tickets will be on sale at parades, at twenty-five cents apiece.

Refreshment at these smokers will take the form of beer, cheese, crackers, smokes, and cokes, which will all be handed out during the course of the evening. Boxing, wrestling, fencing, sing-songs, and band music will make up part of the entertainment. The rest of it will be provided by local talent, i.e., volunteers from the companies themselves.

The M.R.T.B. Band will be in attendance at all of these functions and will provide entertainment consisting of marches and solo items. A pianist will also be on hand for the sing-songs. Further music is to be provided by a quartet made up of band-members.

The six Company Commanders were originally scheduled to officiate in pairs at the three events to take place this week. This has been changed due to unforeseen circumstances, so that at present writing it is not known who will be master-of-ceremonies tonight.

On Tuesday evening "E" and "G" companies will be entertained in the gymnasium. Thursday will see the wind-up of the simultaneous Assault-at-arms-and-smoker series, when the remaining companies, "D" and "F", will hold their festivities, presumably under the direction of their respective captains.

Ruth Hill Wins Speaking Contest

Marion Savage Is Runner-up in Impromptu Event

"If I were a professor" is the topic on which Ruth Hill spoke in winning the R.V.C. Impromptu Speaking Contest last Friday. In her speech, which the judges praised for its wit and fluency, Miss Hill provided the professors with numerous practical suggestions, including the rationalization of dictated notes.

Second place was awarded to Marion Savage, and the three runners-up, who were given honorable mention, were Joan McFarlane, Ina Charleson, and Elizabeth Hillman, in order of merit.

The Contest, which is one of the most important events in the program of the Women's Debating Union, is an annual function, and the debating "A's" and keys are awarded principally on the basis of the results. The judges, each an outstanding woman debater, were Mrs. M. Prew, Mrs. A. K. Hugesen, and Mrs. Galt Danford.

Students Are Human . . .

The Daily received on December 10 the letter appearing in today's "Letter Forum" which is signed Anti Empty Heads. We recommend a careful perusal of this letter.

We are partly agreed with the views expressed in the letter. We agree that a "Campus Queen Contest" is extremely likely to make a bad impression on the public. However, we wouldn't jump to the conclusion that all students are brainless and ignorant of the struggle taking place the world over.

"Gentlemen, there is a war on!" As a consequence of this war, students are putting forth an effort far greater than any they have done in former years. As a consequence of this war, students are subject to a pressure from all sides; criticism, censure; every one of their acts is pulled to pieces in public examination.

Students, perhaps more than any, realize the issues involved in this war—they believe in those principles involved, and they are ready to fight for them—or to study for them.

Which side of the question are we to believe? Students don't come to the universities because they seek to escape military service. They come because they have been told time and time again that their potential skill and leadership will be needed in the future, that they can be of more service in university than by lending their efforts immediately in the armed forces.

Students, however, are human. This is the outstanding fact that most people have forgotten. Students can not all be expected to be sober-minded leaders of the future, champions of democracy in the armed forces, and hard working scholars without also seeking a relief in some way or another.

No doubt the engineers will be severely criticized; for their "Campus Queen Contest," for their "Daily," and for their "Banquet." We submit that all these three were to be expected. In the face of excessive pressure, an excessive reaction is the natural result.

Just a Reminder . . .

. . . that the deadline for the Christmas issue of the Daily is tomorrow, Tuesday, December 16. The number of contributions received to date can hardly be described as staggering. Remember that the writer contributing the best creative piece of work will receive a five-dollar war-saving certificate. Material submitted does not have to be specific Christmas interest. Considerations that will form the basis on which the prize will be awarded are originality and literary merit.

Contributions are to be left for the feature editor either with the attendant at the Union Tuck Shop or in the Daily office. Don't forget—the deadline is tomorrow.

"LADIES IN RETIREMENT"

AT THE CAPITOL

Columbia picture directed by Charles Vidor. Screen play by Garrett Fort and Reginald Denham from a play by Denham and Edward Percy. Photography by George Barnes.

Occasionally out of the welter of "who done it" murder mystery films, a picture appears that manages to escape run-of-the-mill triteness. Such a picture is "Ladies in Retirement."

The story is set in one of the favorite locales of mystery movies, the misty moors of rural England. The main characters are elderly English ladies, who from Lady MacBeth to Mrs. Danvers have, in fiction at least, proved a sinister lot. The plot concerns itself with the murder of Miss Fiske, a retired chorus girl living opulently and with good humour on the fruits of her youthful amorous victories. Havoc is brought into her quiet life with the advent of her housekeeper's two sisters who are afflicted by various eccentricities. When their penchant for tidying up the seashore and collecting dead birds proves too much to be borne, Miss Fiske orders them from her house. The housekeeper, in order to protect her sisters, murders Miss Fiske.

The motive for the murder is the weakest thread in the fabric of the plot. Its inadequacy is not, as it might have been, excused by the theme of family insanity affecting the third sister, the housekeeper. She seems completely sane and only a very active imagination can invent the explanation of insanity for the crime.

"Ladies in Retirement" will inevitably be called a psychological study which it is not. The veneer of pseudo-psychology is applied too thinly to mask the essential shallowness of the story. It is, however, a picture which is well acted and produced with directorial finesse. Those who are familiar with the stage version in which Flora Robson played the housekeeper with suitable vindictiveness, will not be disappointed with the performance of Ida Lupino who, perhaps surprisingly, displays fine talent and consistency in her playing. Isobel Elsom makes Miss Fiske a refined wife of Bath with considerable effect. Elsa Lancaster and Edith Barrett are sufficiently wild-eyed to be convincing as the mad sisters and Louis Hayward plays the part of the nephew with understanding.

"Ladies in Retirement" is a wholly finished production, and is an admirable example of the effective transplanting of a vehicle from stage to screen. —M. S. W.

"BADLANDS OF DAKOTA"

AT THE PRINCESS

Universal release of George Waggner production, directed by Alfred E. Green. Screenplay by Gerald Geraghty from story by Harold Shumate.

Characters.....Players

Anne Grayson.....Ann Rutherford
Wild Bill Hickok.....Richard Dix
Jane.....Frances Farmer
Bob Holliday.....Brod Crawford
Rocky.....Hugh Herbert
Spearfish.....Andy Devine
Jack McCall.....Lon Chaney, Jr.

Uncle Wilbur.....Samuel S. Hinds
The Jesters.....Dwight Latham, Walter Carlson, Guy Bonham

So long as people go to the cinema there will be those who delight in the thrilling suspense and action that go to make up the wild Western pictures, and for these people "Badlands of Dakota" is very good fare. Here we have all the action that can be desired: the hold-up of stage-coaches as they go tearing madly through the sage, the howling of the Indians as they go on the warpath led by Chief Sitting Bull, and, naturally enough, the ever-present conflict arising from the love of two men for one woman.

The story is built around the town of Deadwood, founded by a group of tough miners and badmen after the discovery of gold in the wild-and-woolly West in 1874. Brod Crawford, as Bob Holliday, portrays the man of adventure who has settled down to some extent by opening up the local saloon. To Deadwood he brings his greenhorn brother Jim, played by Robert Stack, with intentions of westernizing him. When Jim is sent back East to bring back Bob's childhood sweetheart (Ann Rutherford) so that she and Bob can be married, the drama unfolds itself, and goes on to some very exciting action. Jim, as marshal, is troubled by the hold-ups of the stagecoach by white men disguised as Indians. Subsequently the town is attacked by a tribe of hostile Indians and some tense action takes place as the hordes come charging in on horseback waving fiery brands to set fire to the village. The picture is brought to a conclusion with the fanfare of bugles as General Custer and his Seventh arrive, incredible as it may seem, to relieve the besieged in the very nick of time.

The comedy roles are well played by Hugh Herbert and Andy Devine, while Richard Dix as Wild Bill upholds the tradition of the straight-shooters of the West.

Added attraction is Cracked Nuts, which just about lives up to its title as a hilarious farce about an attempted swindle with a mechanical robot that was not mechanical. Mischa Auer plays the part of the swindler with his customary arrogance, while Stuart Irwin and Una Merkel show up well as the small town sucker and his girl-friend. —M. D.

TWO-FACED WOMAN

Currently in its second week at the Loew's Theatre, "Two-Faced Woman" is a slapstick comedy of the second rate class, but owing to the acting of one Greta Garbo is lifted from the Grade B class and holds its own as a "fair to middling" modern comedy.

With not much of a plot to go on and the punch lines few and far between the film lags very definitely but in parts the pace is stepped up to keep even the audience laughing for a few minutes at a time. Garbo acts as a nature loving, simple ski instructor who falls in love and marries Melvyn Douglas, wealthy magazine publisher, all in a very short time. The next morning, called away by the press of business, Melvyn Douglas goes his way and Karin, Greta Garbo, stays at Snowledge in Idaho. From then on the picture is a series of slapstick scenes where Garbo goes to New York after her errant husband and pretends that she is her own twin sister. She acts as the perfect siren and makes Melvyn Douglas fall in love with her, and due to a pedicured toenail the whole plot is uncovered and they go on as the happily married couple from there.

Garbo "outGarbo's" herself and really takes the upper hand in this picture. Danting, skiing and swimming, she portrays the perfect outdoor type and then goes ahead and acts brilliantly as the siren. Melvyn Douglas is his usual self and Roland Young, as Douglas' partner deserves credit for his work in this picture. Constance Bennett and Ruth Gordon both fit in very well with the general scheme and add quite a few laughs to the picture.

Running one full-length picture and rounding off the program with a group of shorts is definitely a better idea than running two pictures and met with the applause of the audience at Loew's.

"IT STARTED WITH EVE"

In this film (second week at the Palace), Deanna Durbin plays her tenth starring role, her singing is pleasantly supplemented by a hitherto unsuspected knack for comedy. As a result, Deanna's work is not wholly eclipsed by that of Charles Laughton, which might have been expected.

The plot of this picture is a little more substantial than those of most of the previous Durbin productions. Deanna plays a poor hat-check girl paid by Laughton's son to impersonate his fiancée when he is unable to locate her when Peter Laughton wishes to see her before he dies. Amusing complications ensue.

Laughton gives the masterful performance one automatically expects from him by now. At one point he even does a conga with Deanna.

Guy Kibbee provides skilful support.

THE WISHING WELL . . .

Three times around we walked
Half laughing as we swayed on the narrow edge.

Three times, a magic turn,
While the darkness melted in around us
Patting black-velvet fingers all along our cheeks
And making eery shadows of familiar things.

We stood at the well-rim listening, as through the quietness

The poplars whispered in the night breeze.
Listening until

All the world was hushed and stilled between the looming mountain heights.

Dark dreaming filled the hollow of the pool;
Water gurgled dimly. And suddenly you stooped and drank

Making your wish for all eternity.
Later, remembering other nights

When stars had dreamed in someone else's eyes
I wish too . . . and looked out into the night of nothingness

Remembering . . .

Three times around we walked.
That is the magic of the well where wishes

All come true. Three times through the night
And the whispering dark, as the water bubbles.

A sip of coldness, and your wish
Becomes a note in the song of the well.

Becomes a part of those who have gone . . .
A part of the night magic.

And to those who believe in the mountain
silences

Their wish made there comes true.

Now, far away in another night
Where yellowed leaves are drifting

My belief is all that I have left . . .
Your wish came true, but I yet must wait,
And waiting cope with memories.

Editor, McGill Daily.

Dear Sir,—Through the medium of the Daily I would like to take the opportunity to thank all those who nominated and supported me in the recent elections. May I also take this opportunity to congratulate Miss Jean Curry on her election to the Students' Executive Council.

NORMA NEILSON.

Editor, McGill Daily.

Dear Sir,—Thursday night, Dec. 11, R.V.C. '45 had a St. John's Ambulance exam. This test was entirely practical. All were told to report at 7.45 p.m. and we were then told we would be finished by 10.30 p.m. The last of us left R.V.C. at 11.45 p.m. During the intervening three hours we sat in R.V.C. gym and did nothing except ask each other what we thought would happen.

Would it not have been advisable to have had a group of fifteen or more if necessary, come every half hour? Or do the staff think it would have been too much work to post lists? I am sure any girl would have been willing to help for an hour or so making up lists and posting them either on notice boards or in the Daily.

Could not the War Council, which is at present doing little or nothing see to it that in the future all exams of this type in home nursing, First Aid, etc., are more efficiently run. After all, this should be part of their work and we could have put in those 3 hours doing something of value.

Thanking you for your co-operation.

Sincerely,

Arts '45.

Editor, McGill Daily.

Dear Sir,—In the current issue of the McGill Daily, the Engineers' pride and joy, I noticed a reply to the remarks concerning Montreal, published through your very kind permission in Thursday's issue of your paper.

I do sincerely hope this reply is not an example of their literary ability. By any chance if it is, as Artsmen they will make successful Plumbers! Their remarks show that the mountain in Montreal has affected their accent very much.

However, considering McGill aside from its location, permit me to say in all seriousness, that it is a very fine institution of learning.

Also our stay here has been made very pleasant by the cordial way you, the students and the professors of this famous university have received us.

In conclusion let me say that we sincerely appreciate the opportunity of being with you during our short stay at McGill University.

Sincerely yours,
KENNETH G. WILLIAMS,

Dear Sir: The obnoxious poster re the "Campus Queen" is at last taken down. This kind of absurdity is liable to make a bad impression on the general public who every day pass through our campus. Of all the nauseating, piffing exhibitions of sheer empty brainlessness on the part of our students this surely would take first prize. "Tain't funny, McGee."

Gentlemen, there is a war on! This may be news to some of you who can think of beauty contests in these days of dire peril. If the plumbers be such "dashing, daring gentlemen," why do not some of them dare to dash into the King's uniform, and thereby not only win their own self-respect but also the respect of others? There has been and still is much too much grumbling here re military training. One Med. told me disgustedly that it "interfered so much with his studies." Strange to say, Hitler has a way of interfering with the studies of many persons by destroying such famous old universities as were established in Poland and Czechoslovakia.

According to our newspapers, the attendance this year at both McGill and the U. of Toronto broke all records. How many of our husky Class A students are really enlisting for overseas? How many are nothing but just shirkers, engrossed in the thought of putting in four years of college life, while others enlist?

I should think any Class A man of McGill would be ashamed to take part in salvage drives. There is a big scrap on right now. The biggest in the world's history. So why not collect yourself, get yourself all together and help to salvage Freedom for Humanity? That surely boils down to common sense.

And for the sake of our college and its dignity stop this piffing insanity re "Campus Queens!" It is simply asinine.

ANTI EMPTY HEADS.

Dear Sir, I would like to take this opportunity to thank all those who nominated and elected me in the recent elections as R.V.C. representative to the Students Executive Council. I shall do my utmost to fulfill the obligations of this position to the best of my ability.

Sincerely,
JEAN CURRY.

Dear Sir, In reply to a letter (in Thursday's Daily) of Kenneth G. Williams, of Toronto, Ontario, Canada, I would like to ask him why didn't he stay there? According to all good Torontonians, if you took away Toronto there would be nothing left in Canada. And in rebuttal to his insults toward Montreal and Hamilton, it might be said that if you took away the Canadian National Exhibition you would have nothing left in Toronto (nor would anyone ever have heard of the "small town grown big"). WE LIKE MONTREAL!

The March of Sport by allan

Even though there is snow on the ground—and everything else in sight—our minds are far away from football. It was not so in Chicago, yesterday afternoon, where there was no snow, and tens of thousands of people turned out to see the sudden-death playoff for the western division championship of the National Professional Football League, even in spite of the war. This game was significant from two angles in particular. First of all, it was a sample of some of the most exciting football played anywhere, which was receiving its deserved appreciation by the large attendance; and the fact that such a major sport, with great crowd-appeal during peacetime, does not seem to lose its appeal during wartime.

The team that had the more diversified attack, the Chicago Bears, were able to run up a very imposing sum of thirty-three points. They had a ground attack, built around classy interference, in addition to a lateral passing, and a potent air attack built around the famed forward passer, Sid Luckman. By the art of deception, in starting their end runs and ground attack (either of which were good for substantial gains with the aid of interference) from the same formation, with the same man shifting laterally, they were able to open the Green Bay defence. The fact that so much ground could be gained, reduced the importance of kicking, and cut down the traditional two or three backs and a kick considerably.

The consideration of this game might give some indication of the manner in which the war will effect sports in general below the border. The reaction of public opinion will undoubtedly be wholeheartedly in favour of their continuance. Enlistments in the armed services will bring their own problems, but it is improbable that the leagues will be completely divested of their talent, although athletic activity might have to be curtailed to some extent. At the present time, it seems that the various "Bowl" football games, excepting at the Rose Bowl, in the danger area, will be held as usual, although it is early yet to know what the policy of the universities will be in general. At the present time, as well, the baseball authorities are going ahead with plans for next spring and summer.

Back in Montreal, there are still a few people with as yet unshaken faith in sports, and are already looking forward to next fall. It is reported that they are planning to import the second successive miracle man from Ottawa, namely Ross Trimble. It is a matter for a good hot argument, whether he could have done any better than his predecessor with the same material. However, should he be able to produce a winning team, as he has done at Ottawa, there will then be a fair test of the need for major football in Montreal.

The big game hunter was telling the gullible ladies' group about his African experiences. "There I was," he said, "with a ferocious lion charging me. I had lost my knife and the shot from my gun had failed to stop him. My gun-bearer had bolted and my foot was caught in a root. I didn't have a chance."

"What did you do?" asked one of the breathless females. "He killed me," came the reply. —Queen's Journal.

Three Evenings Feature Boxing, Wrestling and Fencing

The first of a series of long-awaited Company Smokers gets underway tonight at 8.00 p.m. when A and C Companies meet at the Gymnasium for an evening of gala sports entertainment. Tomorrow night will see E and G Companies assembling for their combined smoker and assault-at-arms while the get-together for D and F Companies will take place Wednesday evening.

At each smoker at least eight boxing bouts are scheduled to be staged in the main ring in the centre of the gym floor. At the same time a continuous round of fencing matches will be going on at the east end of the gym. To complete the variety program a series of wrestling bouts will be run off throughout the evening.

POST-ENTRIES ACCEPTED
Thus far 24 boxers have signified their intention of participating in the Assault. To date 22 fencers and 6 wrestlers have entered the meet. However, as yet Macdonald College entrants have not been heard from, and coupled with the usual large number of post-entries, the number of participants should be swelled considerably by the time weighing-in ceases.

Competitors entering either the boxing or wrestling events are expected to report at the B. W. and F. Room this afternoon between 4.00 and 6.00 p.m. Besides their final weigh-in, last minute information as to date and probable time of bouts will be given to the entrants.

BAND TO PLAY
To give the finishing touches to a really fine sports evening the whole program will be interspersed with selections by the M.R.T.B. Band and organized sing-songs. Each smoker, of course, will feature a steady flow of refreshments, not only for tomorrow night's E and G Companies' Engineers, but for all Companies.

Co-chairmen of the combined Company Smokers and Novice Inter-Company Assault-at-arms are Dr. A. S. Lamb and Major H. S. L. Brown. Assisting in the organization of the affairs are the Honorary Company Commanders, the Instructional Officers of the M.R.T.B. and the Staff of the Athletics Department. This organizing committee has indicated that it has left no stone unturned to make the meets really worthwhile and a notable event in the season's sports and entertainment activities.

The Honorary Company Commanding Officers, Prof. C. H. Caruthers, Prof. C. L. Huskins, Prof. A. J. Kelly, Prof. J. U. MacEwan, Prof. C. M. McKergow, and Dean C. S. LeMesurier, are to act as Masters of Ceremonies on the nights on which their respective Companies meet. Chief Program Co-ordinator is to be Lieut. W. A. Clark, ably assisted by Lieutenants G. A. Hart, F. W. Hill, J. E. Birmingham, and W. H. Lewis. Details of the Assault will be arranged by Em Orlick, Hay Finlay, F. M. VanWagner, Tommy Parr, George Tulley, and Frank Saxon.

Honorary guests invited for the occasion are Principal F. Cyril James and Lt.-Col. J. M. Morris. Members of the Committee on Military Instruction, the Committee on Physical Education, the Advisory Athletics Board, and the Executive of the Graduates Society of Montreal have also received invitations to attend one or more of the Smokers.

Entrants to the boxing events to date are the following:—S. P. Rubec, G. R. Roy, D. F. Coates, R. W. MacKinnon, J. R. C. Sheldon, S. Rabatich, H. Ott, A. C. MacLean, A. McKellar, W. Goldberg, I. In the fencing line-up to date are M. Propas, Z. Miller, A. Brainin, N. Siegerman, G. E. Leetham, J. Woods, A. G. Estakis, W. Henry, S. E. Lundgren, W. L. Meuleman, A. Bregman, G. R. Roy, S. "D" Company to Play Independents in Squash

The squash playoffs got underway Friday, with "E" Company sweeping the junior engineers of "G" Company in the first semi-final. The victory was quite decisive, as four of the six top men in the squash ladder, representing the senior engineers took four straight matches.

Today, "D" Company faces the Independents, the winner to play "E" in the final on Wednesday.

The squash ladder is partially complete with over eighty names already received. Any others wishing to enter, can do so by signing the list in the locker room at the gym. The following are the top ten men:

Outing Club Plans Ski Trip

Starts From
Piedmont Station
Dec. 28th

The first of a series of ski tours sponsored by the McGill Outing Club will be held December 28th, starting and ending at Piedmont station.

The trip will cover about ten or twelve miles over easy country not travelled over by the usual cross-country skier. For those who will be on their skis for the first time this year the trip will be ideal. This first ski tour will also provide that long-awaited opportunity for the beginner who has been doing indoor "skiing" to try out the real thing along with other enthusiasts. Notices will be placed in every building on the campus and all who wish to go are expected to sign their names to the lists. Those interested can also get in touch with Johnny Brett at HA. 0098 or DE. 8265 evenings.

MEMBERSHIP CARDS AVAILABLE

The Outing Club now has membership cards available which can be secured from any of the following: Shirley Jackson, Elsey Dettmers, Joan Anderson, Reed Hyde, Earl Morris, Jack Bailey and Jeff Hughton. Students are urged to join the Club as soon as possible so that they may enjoy the facilities of the Outing Club and share in their plans for the holidays.

For those interested in competitive skiing, the Outing Club has planned two meets during the holidays, on December 27th and 30th at St. Sauveur, where a cabin will be available for all McGill competitive skiers.

Providing Mother Nature cooperates the plans made by the enthusiastic Outing Club should develop into one of McGill's most successful ski seasons, from the standpoint of the beginner as well as the experienced skier.

M.R.T.B. companies, the undergraduates of the C.O.T.C. and the McGill Air Force detachment have yet to appoint managers. If they can do that as soon as possible, practices can then be assigned.

The Company Hockey Managers will report to Mr. Hay Finlay, the general Athletics Manager, so that the schedule of games and practices may be drawn up.

Students wishing to compete should sign the lists posted in the Locker Room so that they may be assigned to a team. Game and practice hours will be arranged to fit in with the free time of the various companies concerned. For those that cannot play at evening hours, arrangements may be made for noon-hour games.

The Company Sports Representatives are: Jas. McKee, "A." J. L. Davies, "C." G. Hawker, "D." R. Freeman, "E." W. Parkinson, "F." K. Walter, "G." T. L. Chown, C.O.T.C., H. Graves, Ind.; R. Kingsland, Air Force.

F Company Wins Swimming Meet

R. Johnson Leads In Individual Aggregate Scoring

As a result of the Intercompany Swimming Meet held at the K. of C. pool last Thursday, F Company gained 39½ points to lead the aggregate company score over its nearest rival, the McGill Air Force, by a comfortable margin as the latter rang up the total of 23. E Company, A Company, G Company, C Company, the C.O.T.C. and D Company trailed behind the two leaders in that order.

R. Johnson of the M.A.F. had the highest individual aggregate score as the result of a victory in the diving event, a third place in the 75-yard backstroke, and two fourth places in both the 50-yard free style and the 75-yard breast stroke events.

The only winner of two races was G. Winters who was wearing the colours of the C.O.T.C. His two triumphs were in the 50-yard and 100-yard free style events.

MILLER, HUMPHRIES WIN

Other victors were J. O. Miller of E Company who placed first in the 75-yard breast stroke and R. Humphries of the M.A.F. who came in ahead of the rest in the 75-yard back stroke event.

In the 100-yard relay, F Company showed its heels to the remainder of the contestants.

Other swimmers who were particularly prominent were G. Gauvreau, who placed second in the 50-yard free style, third in the 100-yard free style, and gained a fourth place in the diving event. C. Van Wagner also gave a creditable showing by coming in second in the 75-yard breast stroke, third in the dive, and ninth in the 50-yard free style. E. R. Boothroyd, A. Michael, and P. Margets also swam in noteworthy fashion.

Company standings of the Intercompany Swimming Meet are as follows:—(1) F Company, 39½; (2) M.A.F., 23; (3) E Company, 14; (4) A Company, 12; (5) G Company, 11½; (6) C Company, 11; (7) C.O.T.C., 10; (8) D Company, 0.

Teams Meet At Forum At Noon

In a duel for the leadership of the McGill Hockey League, the long-range guns of the Artillery will open fire upon the Marines this afternoon at the Forum at 12.30.

So far, each team in the league has won one game, with the exception of Macdonald, who were beaten by the Marines in their only tilt; also, everyone has come out on the short end of the score at least once, save the Navy sextet, who set back the Artillery near the very beginning of the schedule in their only encounter.

MARINES SPLIT

In their two first games to date, the Marines beat the Aggies to the tune of 6 to 1, but were themselves turned down in their bid for a second straight victory, when a powerful Air Force aggregation tripped them up with the score of 8 to 2.

The Artillery has suffered the same fate, being the losers of one game to the Navy by the score of 6 to 3, but then they turned on their next opponents, the Infantry, and upset them with the greatest number of goals to date, 12 to 6.

CLEARY, E. SMITH SHINE

Paving the way for the Marines are B. J. Cleary, the coach and the flashy Earl Smith who is leading his team in scoring so far this season. The Artillery may be greatly hampered due to the absence of their coach and outstanding forward, Grant Morrison. Morrison had been out of the line-up for a while due to injuries, and it is not certain yet whether he will be able to play. However, as the results of their most recent display show, the Artillery have plenty of scoring punch.

Both teams are bristling with power, both on the defence and on the offence, and enthusiasm is running high in both camps as both teams are confident of victory and of the gaining of the league leadership.

Beginners' Ski Class Brightened by Coeds

The Monday ski classes for beginners and those wishing to brush up on their elementary techniques are becoming more and more popular.

Sponsored by the Outing Club, the last meeting of the ski class was brightened by fifteen coeds. The enthusiastic group is under the capable direction of Fred Urquhart, experienced local ski instructor.

Now that ample snow has arrived at last the hitherto indoor "skiing" will shortly develop into real skiing with all its attractions looked forward to for so many weeks. A cross-country trip on Dec. 28th will provide an excellent opportunity for the first ski of the season for veterans or for an exciting introduction into the pleasures of skiing for the beginner.

It is hoped that even before the holidays the ski class will be able to meet on the mountain for outdoor ski classes where beginners can gain an introduction to practical skiing.

The Christmas spirit is already making itself felt in the department stores. And the most reliable sign is in the toy department of one of the bigger establishments. A little boy, pretty much exhausted at five o'clock in the afternoon, after spending the greater part of the day riding hobby horses, viewing Krazy Kat movies, and making faces at Dumbo, was heading for the escalators—going down—when his mother pulled him back. "Where do you think you're going?" she barked. "Don't you know momma wants to look at the electric trains!"

VIENNESE BOOKSELLER, FORCED OUT OF COUNTRY, CONTINUES WORK IN SQUARE

Enters U.S. With Affidavit From Telephone Directory

Taking time off from a busy routine as head of the foreign book department of Tutin's Book Store in the Square, Paul Mueller, a former book salesman in Vienna, yesterday told the interesting story of his flight after Nazi occupation, and of his new start in life.

Upon his father's death in 1924, Mueller took over the family book store and ran it successfully until the fateful day of March 13, 1937, when Adolf Hitler's legions invaded Vienna. On March 14 the Nazis were in Mueller's store, as in all other book stores of Vienna, confiscating books of Jewish origin, and plastering swastikas on the outside.

Mueller was soon afterwards put into concentration camp. His wife attempted to run the store during his absence despite frequent interruptions by the Nazis. Released after eight months, Mueller resolved to come to what he calls the "land of freedom."

Selecting a name which corresponded to the maiden name of his wife from a New York telephone book, Mueller dispatched a letter which he hoped would, and which did, bring the affidavit necessary for U.S. entry from an unknown benefactor.

Mueller, delighted with his new position and his life in Cambridge, says, "I feel that I am in the heart of the American cultural centre." His work in Tutin's brings him into contact with the former stock of the Schoenot Book Company, probably the most comprehensive collection of foreign books in the U.S.

In order to bring his wife and daughter to America and "to a new chance for liberty and happiness," Mueller found it necessary to leave behind 40,000 books in Vienna and the business into which he and his father had put so much effort.

ULTRA-MODERN WINDOWLESS HOUSE HAS COMPLETE PRIVACY, LOW COSTS

By Gordy Hoffman

An ultra-modern windowless house, the latest in recent low-cost housing development, is now being completed at the University Housing Research campus, west of the stadium.

Outstanding feature of the residence is its complete lack of windows in all but one of its five rooms. The living room has three windows on one side; all other rooms are illuminated by fluorescent tubes in the ceilings.

Made Of Concrete

Outside dimensions of the squat one-story structure are approximately 33 by 27 feet. The building is made of pre-cast concrete slabs, each of which is three feet wide, about three inches thick and extends the full height of the building. External monotony is relieved by the green trim on the window sashes and by horizontal wooden strips on the front which are also painted green.

Inside there is a fair sized living room, three bedrooms, each 10 by 12 feet, a compact kitchen, a utility room and a small bathroom which is approximately four by four feet. Each room has a small closet.

No Lost Heat

Since most of the heat loss in modern homes is caused by leakage through the windows, this new house will be extremely economical with heat. Heat will be supplied by a hot-water system which is, in turn, heated by natural gas. According to the builders, the saving effected through lack of heat-loss will more than compensate for the additional electricity needed to light the house during the daytime.

The compact kitchen features built-in cabinets and equipment. The heating plant and other utilities are in a small room just off the kitchen. This does away with the necessity of a basement and further lowers the cost. Air-conditioning equipment is also contained in this room.

Super-Privacy.

One desirable feature of the windowless rooms is the fact that windows do not have to be considered in arranging furniture. Besides insuring privacy, additional savings are accomplished because of the lack of curtains and draperies.

This concrete home may be the answer to the great demand for modern low-cost housing within the reach of everyone.

ISS PROVIDES SERVICE BUREAU ON GOVERNMENT.

International Student Service recently announced the opening of a Student Service bureau in Washington, D.C.

Purpose of the Washington bureau is to provide students and members of faculties first-hand opportunities to study operations of the Federal government.

Joseph P. Lash, general secretary of ISS, gave reasons for establishment of the new bureau:

"The need for first-hand observation as a means to implement... knowledge acquired in the classrooms has been recognized by students and teachers. Teachers have encouraged their students to make trips to Washington. Thousands have come every year alone or in groups hoping to obtain a close view of the government in action.

"For most of them, this hope has not been fulfilled... no agency existed to help them discover and use all the possibilities for a deeper understanding of what the capital of this democracy symbolizes. Hence the establishment of our Washington bureau."

To college students and teachers the new office offers these specific services:

(1) Conferences on topics of political, social and economic interests. First gathering will be a five day session, November 28 to December 2. Government officials will lead the discussions.

(2) Aid to teachers and individual students collecting material for special studies, to those desiring information about specific legislation, careers in government service, civilian defence, etc.

(3) Assistance with field trips, including visits to departments, bureaus, and agencies. These visits will be prepared in close co-operation with appropriate officials who will assist students and be available for questions and instructions.

(4) Information to individuals and groups of teachers and students concerning the legislative, administrative, judicial, and technical resources of the government.

For further information, address Miss Molly Yard, Washington Student Service Bureau, 1155-16th St. N. W., Washington, D. C.

YES AND NO MAKE STATUS QUO ON PROBLEM OF DUTCH TREAT

Michigan. — Bring up the subject of dutch-dating and you will find that beneath the rugged exterior of shaggy coats, burly sweaters and undernourished wallets only half the Michigan men heartily approve.

Now in this battle of equals, first we'll try to convince you that dutch-treating is just the thing for this campus and then endeavor to dissuade you.

A disheveled freshman managed to sputter out his emphatic approval for dutch-dating and then added, before we could get away, that it "really doesn't make much difference as I don't date anyhow."

With a disarming smile, a semi-wise junior consented to remove the pipe from his mouth long enough to make his answer audible. "A great idea!" he exploded, "about time somebody thought of that. Dates are mutual, so why shouldn't expenses be mutual? Of course within reason; one has to use his own discretion... and can I use discretion!"

A satisfied senior with a spark in his eyes maintained that dutch dating should almost be made a practice among students who are going together and therefore wouldn't be embarrassed when the unpaid check lay between them on the table just itching to be split evenly. Good sound opinion from one who knows — he wasn't wearing his fraternity pin.

Now that you're all happily convinced, with the exception of the girls, we'll bring the boys who line up on the negative side back into the picture.

"It was good enough for my grandfather, so it's good enough for me," a freshman shouted. He insisted that the men wore the pants on this campus and therefore should pay the bills as usual. A sophomore, after meditating a full minute, came forth with this: "Now, it wouldn't work. Girls can wear mannish suits, they can play football, smoke pipes and sundry other exclusively masculine things, but pay the bills? No sir! That's our last chance to show supremacy and by gosh! we'll cling to it."

A premature senior, wandering around in a cap and gown said: "I'd feel like a fool. Besides you can't be collegially sophisticated and go on dutch-treat dates." Well, seniors aren't fools nor are they sophisticated, so what does that prove?

There you have the consensus of opinion over the crucial problem facing the modern university. Of course, there are those individuals who have no opinion one way or the other, so, girls, it's up to you to treat such a situation sensibly.

SKIERS MAY ENLIST IN NEW ARMY BATTALION.

With a three year enlistment period of intensive training, service in the United States Army's new ski battalion now lies open to all men with or without previous skiing or mountaineering experience, Law Professor A. James Casner, head of the University's new Defence Advisory Board, announced recently.

All those who would like to join the unit are requested by Professor Casner to confer with him, and also, to write to the National Ski Patrol System in New York City, which has been asked to furnish the army with the names of qualified applicants, for more detailed information and a questionnaire.

Recently inaugurated by the army after a year of slow experimentation and development, the ski outfit is known officially as the 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry Mountain Regiment (Reinforced).

Located in Washington.

At present the unit is located at Fort Lewis, Washington, pending its removal to a permanent station to be announced later.

Professor Casner further states that men who expect to be drafted into the regular army may apply for transfers to the ski division. Every effort will be made to secure an able personnel even from among draftees, although only qualified volunteers can be guaranteed immediate assignments to the new battalion.

Four months of army service within the past two years and excellent physical condition, are essential requirements for all those seeking admission to the ski unit. Men who have not acquired the necessary military experience must first undergo a 13 months' basic training course.

DEBUNKING ASTROLOGY

Armed with a fifty page report a committee of the American Association of Scientific Workers, headed by Bart Jan Bok, associate professor of Astronomy, will throw down the gauntlet to the rapidly increasing tens of thousands of astrologers in this country today. This is the result of six months of exhaustive research by astronomers at Harvard.

Everybody does not know that astrology is the bunk, the report shows. At the news stands where Harvard men buy their magazines, in Harvard Square, you can buy thirteen different astrological periodicals in ten minutes. The Boston Herald Traveler and the Boston American both run columns on astrology.

Quoting an article in Time magazine last fall, Dr. Bok said that enough money is spent on astrology in the United States each year to finance the building of fifteen 200 inch telescopes, such as the one now being built at a cost of eight million dollars. This telescope will double the range of present instruments. "Money spent on astrology helps nobody," Dr. Bok pointed out.

Psychologists, Sociologists Agree

Gordon W. Allport '10, associate professor of Psychology, supported by the Executive Council of the Society for Psychological Study of Social Issues made the statement that there is not the slightest benefit from, or grounds for believing in astrology.

He further explained that in times of depression or war, when moral habits are weakened, belief in the occult increases. Pitirim A. Sorokin, professor of Sociology supported this view by declaring last night that in times of disintegration of society, like the present and like the time of the decay of the Roman Empire, a growing interest in astrology is likely to be one of the manifestations of the social and cultural disintegration.

Astology Is Condemned By The Courts

The report prepared by the committee points out in detail that many states have laws prohibiting the practice of astrology and shows that in very few cases have these laws been enforced. The committee plans to attack astrologers wherever possible by means of existing laws and recommends the enactment of more effective and uniform laws. The Federal Communication Commission, it points out, has ruled astrologers off the air as a result of protests by the American Astronomical Society and the American Society of Magicians.

THE NEXT BEST THING

Harvard has been subject to criticism from all sides in the past few years for failing to turn out liberally educated students, and one of the most pertinent of the claims has dealt with the over-concentration allowed by the lenient rules on distribution. The Student Council recognized this defect in the present system in its Education Committee report of last June which proposed a system of five broad, introductory courses to be required of all students. Now before the Faculty is a report from its Committee on Distribution which proposes a different solution designed to remedy this Achilles' heel in Harvard's educational system.

Essentially the plan divides the curriculum into the three areas of the natural sciences, the social sciences, and the arts, letters and philosophy. Under this plan John Harvard '45 would be required to take at least one course in each of these three areas. He would be exposed to the scientific, the sociological, and the philosophical methods of tackling a problem. It would be an invaluable experience for him even if the pill is a bit hard to swallow at first. In turn these areas are subdivided into sections which contain similar fields of concentration presented in the same manner. The important change, however, is that the student must take six courses outside of any one section. This will prevent the student from taking too many courses in any one field in order to make sure of passing his general examinations in his Senior year. It will broaden the intellectual horizon of the honor student with a narrow viewpoint by forcing him to take more courses in closely related subjects. Certain courses will not be included in the various sections as they are too elementary; these include elementary language and composition courses and such others as are primarily interested in acquiring a technique.

This new plan, although it is not nearly as comprehensive as that suggested by the Council Committee, will certainly tend to prevent the undergraduate from avoiding a broad education. It will force him to acquaint himself with the different types of academic approach: that of the humanities as well as that of science. Although it will affect only a small fraction of the students in every class, it will make it virtually impossible for a Senior to graduate from Harvard without a liberal education.

CAMPUS LIFE WAS CENTRED IN OLD LIBRARY

Michigan. — Back in the days before bluish and bustle disappeared from campus, and Michigan's maid still was coy, tradition demanded—and librarian exhorted—that Ed and Coed occupy different sides of study tables in the old library.

The old library, with its twin towers, was the real centre of the campus in those days. Not unlike a river steamboat in shape, the building was impressive with its many appendages. In one tower was the old University clock, in the other the famous chimes, modelled after those of Jesus College, England.

Twice a day, at 5.27 and 7.27, the chimerical melodies rang out over Ann Arbor, heralding the arrival and departure of the day, and many a sentimental undergraduate shed an extra tear in his beer at the sound.

The library, however, is best remembered for its whispering gallery, a long, dark low room running around the dome. The least whisper in one end of the room could be heard quite clearly anywhere in the room.
